Little Paul Weybecher, eleven years old, and Nora Crocher, aged sixteen, ran away together from the Fisher Home for Orphans in Paterson because they level each other so. This was one of the reasons. Another was that some New Jersey farmer had been appointed guardian over little Paul and the innocent love and friendship ties that had bound the two children together for months were about to be severed. Nora stale a purse containing $3 and the youthful romancers hied themselves to this city. Yesterday they returned to the Fisher Home, tired, sick, hungry and without money. Their own pathetic stories are told below.

uncoment came that a family wanted Paul. He broke down and cried and everybody cise eried, too. The children cried and Mrs. Fisher cried, and I guess I cried harder than any one else. I just thought my heart would break.

That night we orawled under a table and I put my arms around his neck.

"Paul," I said, "don't cry. I'm going to take care of you. I won't let them take you away from me. You and I will go away to New York, and I will carn the money to support us both."

Paul's sister said the same and he

Sunday night we made all our plans. I had taken a purse of the assistant matron. It had $8 in it. Paul sat up all night and at 8 o'clock in the morning he crawled over the plassa roof and under the steps. At 5 I joined him and we hurried away and took the car for New York. I war a little fright-ened by the noise, but I did not let Paul know, for then he would have been scared, too. I said that we would go and find a place to live, and that then I would go out and find work.

Well we walked and walked. The more we went the bigger the city got. My! What a place! Is there eny end to

When supper time came, Paul was was afraid the money would give out. So I took him to a restaurant and got him some supper. But I went without. After dark we were on the big bridge. We were wet and cold and we began to get frightened.

"Let's go home," said Paul. "T'm

Panhions.

The shopping world found its mecca yesterday at Simpson's, Sixth avenue and Twentisch street. The announcement of the firm's street. The announcement of the firm's Spring opening display of imported gowns and confections drew the women folk like a magnet. Every department of the immense bassar displayed nov-elties and had its share of admiring patrons, but the big show was in the department set apart for the display of department set apart for the display of imported gowns.

One of the most admired of these was a Callett creation of polita dot liberty foulard covered with black lace. A lime, Paquin design in old-fashioned shotslik, though the height of present fashion, to remindful of the gowns our grandmothers used to wear. The quaint effect is due to a kilted shirt with six rows of tucks about the bottom, a high bedice and the half blows effect and the new sleeves, running to the elbow and terminating in a deep cuff of chiften.

The journey to Rome is a long one, and very few of the faithful ever have the good fortune to gain admittance to the Pope's presence, so closely is he guarded at all times. But you can see him in these wonderful moving pictures, walking and driving in the beautiful gardens of the Vatican, surrounded by a retinue of dignitaries, the picturesque Swiss Guards, &c. When these pictures were first shown at Carnegie Hall, this city, the admission fee was $2. Now you can see them for 10c., and the proceeds go to a worthy cause. Don't put it off 'till the 'eleventh hour,' as you may find the lecture room too crowded.
